Department of Indigenous Services Canada

In August 2017, two new departments were created:

- Department of Indigenous Services Canada
- Crown Indigenous Relations and Northern Affairs

First Nations and Inuit Health Branch (FNIHB) was combined with several elements of the former Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada to create the new Department of Indigenous Services Canada.

First Nation and Inuit Health will continue the important work of improving health outcomes within Indigenous Services Canada.

Transforming how the Department is structured, sharing information and working with its partners and clients will allow us to build stronger and better ways of delivering services to Indigenous people.

Regional Engagement with Partners

Three key questions:

- What needs to change in terms of service delivery in communities?
- What is working and what isn't?
- How can we improve our working relationship, partnerships and approach to governance?
